DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ingram (US 4,816,109). Ingram discloses a glue tape cutter comprising a cutting table (Figure 1, frame 10) with two opposite lateral covers (Figure 5, sides 11 and 12); a curved pressing substrate (Figure 1, roller 21), being disposed at the bottom of the cutting table; at least a holding blade (Figures 6 and 8, pin 48), being fixed to the cutting table above the curved pressing substrate; a cutting base (Figure 2, lever unit 31), being rotationally attached to the cutting table; a knife blade (Figures 6 and 8, cutter plate 45), being attached to an upper part of the cutting base; and a shaft (Figures 2 and 5, shaft 32), being disposed at a lower part of the cutting base and both ends thereof being attached to the lateral covers of the cutting table respectively whereby, once the cutting base rotates, the glue tape (Figure 6, tape 38) can produce an adhered reversed fold (Figure 6, tab 57), characterized in that an end of the shaft extends outward from the lateral cover to engage with an engaging hole at an end of a stir lever, 42, so that the stir lever can rotate the cutting base. Ingram fails to show a spring mounted in the engaging hole to keep the stir lever and the cutting base in place. Springs are conventional for holding elements such as shafts in engaging holes. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to add a spring to the apparatus of Ingram because they are commonly used in construction of moving parts of an apparatus.

Regarding claims 5 flat sections of shafts and engaging holes are commonly used for alignment of shaft in the proper rotational orientation.

Regarding claim 6, receiving surfaces of engaging holes commonly include recesses for receiving a shaft or article, such as a spring, which only extends part way into the hole.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

4. Claims 4-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

5. Claim 4 recites the limitation "the press plate" in line 6. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. It is presumed the claim was intended to refer to the curved substrate.

Allowable Subject Matter

6. Claim 7 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

7. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The reference to Ingram would not be modifiable to include a spring with a hook end passing through and retaining at an aperture of the lateral cover because the engaging hole of Ingram is at a distance from the lateral cover.
